

Solicitation Form Identity Study

As a part of her senior thesis, Elise Hocking invites you to participate in a study about identity. Should you be interested in participation, you will complete several scales measuring aspects of identity and attitudes towards others. It is expected that this study will take approximately 30 minutes of your time.

There are no known risks to you as a participant in this study. However, if you feel any discomfort during your participation, you may withdraw from the study at any time without penalty.

There are some benefits to you for participating in this study. You may learn something about the research process in psychology. You may also learn something about your own identity and how it relates to attitudes towards others.

No names will be associated with any data collected in this study, and every effort will be made to maintain the confidentiality of your answers. All records of this study will be kept private and in a safe location.

Your decision whether or not to participate will not affect your current or future relations with Jamestown College or with the Psychology Department. If you decide to participate, you can withdraw at any time without affecting those relationships.

Sign up sheets are posted in the Psychology Department office. If you would like to participate, choose a day and time that is convenient for you. Please legibly print your first and last names in the appropriate space. In addition, we encourage you to write down the appointment information (day, date, time and location) in your day planner.

If after signing up for this study, you discover that you are unable to attend your appointment, please contact Elise Hocking at ehocking@jc.edu as soon as possible before the start time of your appointment.
